

RESEARCH BRIEF

NOVA’s Early Momentum and Equity Scorecards:
Early Momentum Metrics by Student Type, Age Group, and Race/Gender, Fall 2016 First-Time in College Cohort

Introduction

For community college students, gaining momentum early can be a critical predictor of long-term success. In other words, students who are successful early on in their academic career are more likely to achieve long-term academic goals, such as graduating with a two-year degree and/or transferring to a four-year institution.¹ Therefore, by monitoring success metrics associated with early momentum toward long-term goals (“early momentum metrics”), colleges can evaluate where student progress is stagnating.

It is even more critical to monitor early momentum metrics for groups with historically lower success rates—such as part-time students, minority students, and older students. A stronger understanding of how these students are performing early in their academic careers can help colleges to deliver interventions and support services to help them get back on track.

In This Brief

- I. This Brief reviews early momentum metrics (i.e., student success metrics from three critical time points in a student’s academic career: the first term, first year, and second year) for the Fall 2016 first-time in college (FTIC) cohort of NOVA students.²
- II. To show whether there are disparities among certain groups of students, this Brief disaggregates early momentum metrics by student type (e.g., developmental, Pell grant, and part-time students), age group, and a combination of race and gender.

Key Finding

This Brief finds that part-time students, older students, and male racial/ethnic minorities struggle the most with gaining early momentum. These student groups, on average, accumulate fewer credits each semester, are less likely to return to campus for subsequent semesters, and complete college-level gatekeeper courses at a lower rate.

Early Momentum Metrics by Student Type

The figures below present first term, first year, and second year early momentum metrics by student type, including: developmental education (i.e., students who enrolled in at least one developmental course in the first fall term), Pell grant recipients (i.e., students who received a Pell grant award), and part-time students (i.e., students who took fewer than 12 credits).³

First Term (Figure 1)

- The percentage of students earning a GPA of 2.0+ in their first semester was lower among part-time students, developmental education students, and Pell grant recipients, compared to all FTIC students at NOVA.
- Part-time students are nearly twice as likely to have earned zero credits in their first semester, compared to all FTIC students at NOVA.
- Developmental students also struggled at gaining early momentum: only ten percent completed 80 percent or more of all credits attempted in the first semester and even fewer—4 percent—earned at least 12 credits with a passing grade (A to C-).

- Overall, part-time students had the lowest success rates on first year early momentum metrics, compared to all FTIC students at NOVA.
- Most notably, while 81 percent of all FTIC students re-enrolled for the following Spring semester, only 68 percent of part-time students re-enrolled.
- Part-time students also completed college-level courses at lower rates than all FTIC students: 46 percent completed college-level English, 16 percent completed college-level math, and 12 percent completed both English and math (compared to 62 percent, 33 percent, and 29 percent of all students, respectively).

³ It should be noted that the three student type groups are not mutually exclusive. A student can be classified into just one category—for example, a part-time student—or in any combination, such as a student who is part-time, developmental, and received a Pell grant. Therefore, for this data, all FTIC students at NOVA in Fall 2016 is provided as a reference group.

- Overall, part-time students had the lowest success rates on second year early momentum metrics, compared to all FTIC students at NOVA.
- Only half of part-time students re-enrolled for a second Fall semester (compared to 65 percent of all students), and even fewer—3 percent—had completed 48 or more credits with a passing grade (compared to 15 percent of all students).

Early Momentum Metrics by Age Group

The figures below present first term, first year, and second year early momentum metrics by the following age groups: less than 20 years old, 20 to 24 years old, and 25 years or older. The majority of FTIC students in the Fall 2016 cohort at NOVA (77 percent) are in the first age group, which indicates a traditional college age.

First Term (Figure 4)

- Overall, older students (ages 25+) had the lowest success rates on each of the first term early momentum metrics, compared to other age groups.
- Less than half of older students (ages 25+) earned a GPA of 2.0 or higher in the first term compared to a majority of students under the age of 24. Likewise, while nearly one-fourth of students younger than 20 earned 12 or more credits with a passing grade, only 6 percent of students older than 24 earned the same number of credits during this time period.

- Overall, older students (ages 25+) had the lowest success rates on first year early momentum metrics, compared to students in other age groups.
- Most notably, while 83 percent of students younger than 20 re-enrolled for the following Spring semester, only 74 percent of students aged 20-24 and 70 percent of students older than 24 re-enrolled the following Spring.
- Older students (ages 25+) also completed college-level courses at lower rates: 31 percent completed college-level English, six percent completed college-level math, and four percent completed both English and math.

Second Year (Figure 6)

- Overall, older students (ages 25+) also had the lowest success rates on second year early momentum metrics compared to students in other age groups.
- Less than half of older students (ages 25+) re-enrolled at NOVA for a second fall semester, compared to 68 percent of students younger than 20 and 58 percent of those aged 20-24.
- Only three percent of older students (ages 25+) had completed 48 credits with a passing grade by the end of their second year, compared to nearly one-fifth of students younger than 20 and eight percent of students aged 20-24.

Early Momentum Metrics by Race and Gender

The figures below present first term, first year, and second year early momentum metrics by a combination of race and gender.

First Term (Figure 7)

- Overall, white females outperformed other race/gender groups on all four first term early momentum metrics. Latina females and white males also outperformed most other race/gender groups.
- African American males, African American females, and latino males had the lowest performance on most early momentum metrics. Of particular note, only between 23 and 26 percent of these groups completed 80 percent of credits attempted.

- All race/gender groups re-enrolled at NOVA for the following Spring semester at similar rates (between 77 and 84 percent).
- White females, white males, and latina females had the highest rates of completion of college-level courses, including English and math.

Second Year (Figure 9)

- Overall, females of all racial/ethnic groups returned for the following Fall semester at higher rates (between 63 and 66 percent) than male students (between 58 and 61 percent).
- Only ten percent of African American males and Latino males had completed 48 credits with a passing grade by the end of their second year, the lowest of all race/gender groups.
