OVERVIEW

 This program is a collaboration between NOVA and George Mason University's international branch campus in Incheon, South Korea. Students will live and study on the Mason Korea campus, taking two courses (one in business and one in economics) that will directly transfer back to NOVA. Courses will be taught by residential Mason faculty, and students will study alongside other Mason Korea students, including Korean students and Mason study abroad students. Cultural excursions and lessons in South Korean history, art, and cooking/food are planned to enrich the experience. Students will also be able to network both on and off campus, meeting international faculty and community members throughout the trip. While this program is designed for Business Administration majors based on coursework, anyone who meets the criteria (including the Business 100 course prerequisite) is eligible to apply and attend.
