VTN 101-102 - BEGINNING VIETNAMESE I -II (5 CR.) (5 CR.)

Course Description

Introduces understanding, speaking, reading and writing skills and emphasizes basic Vietnamese sentence structure. Lecture 5 hours per week.

General Course Purpose

Beginning Vietnamese, a basic introductory course, places emphasis on the development of proficiency in the following skills: Listening, Speaking, Reading, and Writing. Students learn to function in the language within a limited context of vocabulary and structure. The course also includes a general introduction to culture.

Course Objectives

A. Listening

The student will understand short, learned material and some full sentences, particularly where context strongly supports understanding, and speech is clearly audible. The student will understand words and phrases from simple questions, statements, and high-frequency commands, although repetition, rephrasing, and/or a slowed rate of speech may be required.

B. Speaking

The student will communicate by relying heavily on learned materials, while occasionally expanding these through simple recombination of their elements. The student will ask questions or make statements involving learned materials. The student will show signs of spontaneity, although, speech continues to consist of learned material rather than of personalized, situationally adapted materials. The student's pronunciation will approximate native speech, although, it may still be strongly influenced by first language. The student's vocabulary centers on areas such as basic objects, places, and most common kinship terms. The student will be able to make himself or herself understood by sympathetic native speakers, although, repetition may be required.

C. Reading

Where vocabulary has been learned, the student can read common messages, phrases, or expressions. At times, but not on a consistent basis, students may be able to interpret material in context at a slightly higher level.

D. Writing

The student will be able to write short passages in Vietnamese.
